President Arroyo wants to continue serving the people even after she steps down from office in June 30 next year, her election lawyer said yesterday.

Lawyer Romulo Macalintal, who has been authorized to speak on the issue on Mrs. Arroyo's possible political plans for next year, said her work as President would not be adversely affected if she runs for Congress representing the sixth district of Pampanga.

"There is no serious contender against her in case she runs," Macalintal said in a telephone interview, stressing that she has not yet expressly informed him of her decision to run.

"The President is still young and she feels that there's still a lot of things she can do to continue public service," he said.
